Actress Sienna Miller is hopping mad over humiliating revelations that her fiance and Alfie co-star bedded his children's chubby nanny. Despite the actor's scandalous sexploits, Miller will likely be left with a naked ring finger according to divorce attorney John Mayoue.

In both the United States and Great Britain, where the estranged couple reside, an engagement ring is a conditional gift -- no wedding, no ring. The US rule used to provide that the person at fault had to forfeit the bauble. "Courts had problems figuring out who was wrong", says Mayoue. These difficulties led to the current "no-fault engagement ring policy."

Despite an old-time British case that says a man who "refuses to comply with the terms of the engagement" loses the ring, Mayoue says Miller would be on shaky ground today if Law were to demand the sparkler's return. Though his failure to live up to his end of the deal couldn't be clearer, it's likely that Miller will hang on to nothing but bad memories.

It was a different story for Law's ex-wife Sadie Frost. After Law ditched her for Miller in 2003, Frost went on to snag a reported $8 million plus settlement -- and she kept her engagement ring, which was valued at a comparatively paltry $19,000. But it doesn't grace her finger, or her jewelry box, today. It was stolen from her London apartment in March.
